

M'CONE TAKES OATH AS C.I.A.'S DIRECTOR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP)

President Kennedy looked on Wednesday as John A. McCone, Los Angeles industrialist, was sworn in as director of the Central Intelligence Agency at a White House ceremony.

"We want to welcome you here and to say that you are now living on the bull's eye, and I welcome you to that spot," Mr. Kennedy told Mr. McCone, who served in the Eisenhower Administration as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Members of the Cabinet and Allen W. Dulles, Mr. McCone's predecessor as C. I. A. director, attended the ceremony. Chief Justice Earl Warren administered the oath.

When Mr. Kennedy handed over his commission, Mr. McCone told the audience of his own appreciation for the confidence the President expressed in making the appointment. He went on to say he was not mindful of the very difficult task it would be, following in the footsteps of Allen Dulles, whose record in this area was so corrective and fully outlined yesterday.
